

SANDRA L. JUNO
Brown County Clerk
Green Bay, WI

Sandy was elected Brown County Clerk in 2012 and is completing her first 4 year term in office. Prior to her election she served as Chief Deputy Brown County Clerk for over 16 years. Sandy is member of the Wisconsin County Clerks Association (WCCA) and is the Legislative Committee chair. Sandy testifies before the legislature to support or oppose pending legislation. She also serves on the WCCA Elections Committee.

Brown County is the fourth most populous county in Wisconsin and the third largest media market. Sandy believes that good elections planning, management, and organization are keys to excellence in elections accuracy and timely reporting of election results. Sandy works closely with 24 municipal clerks and 12 school district clerks to develop unified election practices. Several accomplishments include all jurisdictions legal notices are combined, all municipalities use the same election equipment, and all have standard processes and procedures. Cooperation has resulted in improved efficiencies and reduced costs.

Sandy has been a member of the Brown County Republican Party for over 25 years. She has served in various leadership rolls including party chairman for four years. She has extensive experience in campaigns and political party activities at the local, state, and national level. Her comprehensive knowledge of elections is also the result of working with various interest groups and recognizing their needs and perspectives.

Prior to joining county government Sandy worked for a private college and an international market research company. Sandy earned her Bachelor of Arts degree in communications with an emphasis in political science at St. Norbert College, De Pere, Wisconsin.

Sandy is married to Charles J. Juno, Ph. D. They reside in Green Bay, Wisconsin and are lucky to have two grown daughters and four grandchildren residing in Brown County.
